Currently reading a 1920 campaign book for Warren Harding. You think we have overblown, longwinded statements now, listen to this:

Nationalism is the life-theme of Warren Harding. When the delegates at the 1920 GOP convention in Chicago called Sen. Harding as the partys standerd bearer for 1920, they chose a man whose controlling passion is, and has ever been, a completete devotion to America, strong and free, sovreign and supreme. As Sen Harding becomes more known to the American people, he will stand forth as the greatest nationalist of his day. Ever since he entered into public life as a member of the Ohio legislature, he has thought in terms national. His devotion to the national ideal is the composite of the belief in William McKindley in representative gov't and the absolute Americanism of Theodore Roosevelt.

If the Red Sox have won the World Series, does that mean Nader has a shot at the White House?

I post the Warren Harding thing to show how absurd some political rhetoric can get some times.

I Posted this on the previous thread, but just saw their was a new one. It was in response to someone claiming Chris Matthews was Biased simply because he had a whistleblower against Halliburton on his show:

Go Buckeyes....the FBI is investigating the case. It's the real deal.

<http://www.cnn.com/2004/US/10/28...rton/index.html>

That's what I just can't deal with...anything factual that involves some misgivings within the administration that is reported or covered somehow shows the media is biased.

What this does is set up a culture where no one trusts anything but what comes straight from the administration. It is virtually the same as having no free press at all.

The Republican mantra in this campaign has been to go after the source first and foremost, instill doubt in the public about the neutrality of the source...then if things end up to be proven true, it doesn't matter, because the minions, have already written it off.

Just look at the power Drudge has. He makes a leading story basically saying the NY Times lied, and claimed they didn't have evidence, then he posts that "Russia responsible for moving weapons to Syria" Based on a single Pentagon workert, who the administration distanced themselves from.

But facts don't matter...just inuendo is enough to have people running.

From another conservative Blog...this guy posted that ihe Russians were responsible. But, thankfully....he at least retracted it later in the day, after he admitedly jumped the gun. Unfortunately, while this guy gets maybe hundreds of hits...Drduge gets millions.

There has been no retraction from Drudge.

In any political situation the truth is irrelevant. It is only the established perception, and then the counter perception, and if the counter perception strong enough it will neutralize the original point.

Whether there were weapons or not is irrelevant.

The notable part about this exploding Haliburton story is not the favoritis - which is obvious but the intimiadation. this whistleblower has a huge harassment case. It is symptomatic of how this Government treats all honest professionals from CIA people, to Terrorism, people to Army Generals and and Journalists-if you try and do your job you put your Career and family on the line.

Freedom on the march - in your dreams. We are living in an Orwellian nightmare.

As more and more time goes on, as passions get fired up, I think I ultimately agree with Ron's presidential analysis. The Bush states wil be even stronger (instead of getting 65% in Utah, Bush might get 70%). The blue states will probably be stronger for Bush too (instead of 35% in Connecticut, Bush might get 40%). I think the only states that won't go Bush are the states with a 'grudge' against Bush. Those states are Florida and Ohio. Ohio has a grudge because of the economy, and Florida has a grudge because of 2000. I think the rest of the battlegrounds (except NH) Bush will probably get a few of those Gore voters more than Kerry will get Bush voters. So my ultimate prediction is that Bush wins the popular vote, and Kerry wins the electoral vote. Kerry picks up NH (just because of Nader being marginalized, and Kerry being from New England), OH, and FL; Bush picks up WI, IA, MN, and NM. That makes it Kerry 279 Bush 259 (I base this not on polls, which I dont trust, but on a Southern man's intuition)

Well it's interesting to see that those missing explosives in Iraq *were* there after all when US troops arrived. There's video to prove it, showing the IAEA seals and everything. And David Kay, the weapons inspector, has positively identified the explosives on CNN.

Looks like the administration's goose is cooked.

Bush spin caught with it's pants again. Those weapons- this was the spin:

- 1) Kerry not backing the troops
- 2) Weapons lost before invasion
- 3) Russians too th eweapons to Syria
- 4) Aren't we glad that Saddam does not have these explosives
- 5) Kerry does not know what he was talking about.
- 6) Pentagon produces satellite photo of a truck outside the buildingbefore the invasion.
- 7) Penatgon says looting virtually impossible.

Now we have the facts. A Video showing the Seal, the Seal broken and the weapons in the Bunker on April 18, 2003

Spin your way out of that. How much crap must we swallow?

This is simply total imcompetence - you do not break a seal (that was reported to you) and then abandon the facility.

Anybody who has been to Ohio knows that Ohio is a cesspool for the most shitfaced morons in the country. The entire rationale behind our country being perceived as largely uneducated and generally stupid by most other countries with high education standards can be attributed ENTIRELY to the state of Ohio. If I were President, I would encourage North Korea to get rid of its nuclear weapons...by setting them off in the state of Ohio and turning the entire shithole into a sheet of glass.

Although I certainly have nothing against Aussie observer, I do believe that Australian voters are hypocrites. Polls I have seen show that Australians as a whole vehemently disagree with the US decision to invade Iraq, so what do they do? They re-elect a leader who supports the Iraq war 100 percent. I just don't see the kinda logic in that decision making. That is why I have decided that Australia must be engulfed in a sea of nuclear fire.

To the insulter of Australians. I think the world community has pretty much pegged Bush yet 70% of Bush voters are clueless. proof provided in previous post.

Ask any European basic questions about US politics and I guarantee you they will know more.

44% of Americans are Creationists for heavens sake. 88% believe that God directly intervened to create Homo sapiens. i.e one day there was the Hobbit (18,000 years ago) and God said - you are too short, you must be 6 Foot tall - so today you are Homo sapiens so that you may go forth and rape the planet.

World opinion is relevant, it is world citizens that must suffer from political instability, the destruction of culture and Global Warming. the US has 5% of the worlds population that produces 30% of the worlds pollution.

The world cares and its voice will grow louder the deeper you bury your head. We all breath the same air - we are all part of humanity and rogue nations will eventually implode.

"Reactionary" For the Left, that is anybody that does not submit to their dogma. Reactionary thoughts must be clean from your minds and from society as a whole, so that we may PROGRESS to the utopian vision.

Have your progress all you want. Just not on my property.

Kev, I think you are a little too excited right now.

Repubs have many factions, and the Religious Right is one of them. But still, full blown theocrats are a minority within the RR.

I am more passionate about this election than I have ever been in regards towards anything. The justices who fill the vacancies in the supreme court will reflect the presiding candidates policies for our nation for decades to come. President Bush will appoint reactionary fuckers who oppose workers rights, civil rights, and bring us a step closer to a christian Iran. Why can't you fucking republicans just STOP IT with regards to infusing the christian perception of what is moral(which I find abhorrent btw) and just be content with your right to freely practice whatever faith you hold as garunteed by the first amendment? Why can't you morons understand how vitally important it is that government remain neutral on religion? JUST LOOK AT THE LESSONS LEARNED IN history! Religion in government has lead to nothing but societal decline. Hell, just look at the world around you today! Iran, Saudi Arabia are both theocracies, countries where all dissenting viewpoints are quelled with military might, a country where women are stoned to death for being raped, or not wearing their hideous birkas, and where anti-americanism and anti-semitism fuels hatred and brainwashes future generations leading to an endless cycle of this brutal regime. Can't you see it, you may think religion is good and can solve all problems but religion combined with government LEADS TO OPPRESSION!

FUCK IT! I'm done playing nicely with you fuckers, it's time to stop you by any means possible. Hopefully this can be done with the ballot box come november second, but if your party insist on moving us further to a christian dictatorship don't think everyone is going to welcome facism with open arms. Of course we can only stop you temporarily in terms of deciding where our nation leads politically, but the only way to protect our nation's future generations of the bigotry, hatred, intolerance, and IGNORANCE of your malevolanet christian faith will be to stain the land with an ocean of christian blood. We need to exterminate every single one of you and burn every one of your religious scriptures.

a minority of people in the religious right are theocrats? The ENTIRE PURPOSE of the religious right is to create an America ruled by biblical principles and governed based on the law of the bible. EVERYBODY in the religious right is a theocrat and while there may be some in the republican party who are not, they still support the religious right by voting for the political party which they control which makes them equally as deserving to die. I can't just view the republican party as a political opponent, I see them as a threat which I must fear and resist by all means necessary, especially as somebody who is both bi-sexual and atheist. We must have a government which is tolerant in order to ensure that everybody is granted an equal opportunity to succeed. We need politicians who practice the politics of kindness, not the politics of division.

The only reason why I brought it up is because I wonder if it is truly the only possible solution to stop you and your religion from turning this nation into a religious dictatorship.

Dudeman5685, answer me! Why can't christians just go to church, practice their faith, preach whatever it is they want to preach and leave it at that? Why do they need to create a government which holds a bias towards their beliefs?

I understand your first post was fanatasy Kev, but you shouldn't joke about those things. Especially rape.

I belong to the wing of the Republicna party that doesn't care what you believe or what you do in private. But when it comes to gay marriage or something similiar, you force the State, and all of its citizens, to recognize the validity of something against their religion.

Would you force an Orthodox Jewish community to have a pork festival?

dudeman5685 | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 12:01 am | #

let me rephrase that. I would never support a law which discriminates against people because they are a christian.

Kevin | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 12:01 am | #

I DON'T hate gays. It is against Christian teaching to hate anyone. In fact I have know and personally liked some gays. I don't agree with them, as I migh not agree with an Astros fan, but I can still be freinds with them.

Even Jerry Falwell, whom I don't agree with most of the time, condemed the "God Hates Fags" demostrations as mean and counter-productive.

dudeman5685 | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 12:04 am | <#>

dudeman5685, when it comes to the issue of marriage it is YOUR party that is trying to force all states, and all citizens to accept marriage as only between a man and a woman, the democratic party has been consistent that it believes marriage is an issue which is best left to the states. It seems almost anti-thetical for a party which advocates states rights to be pushing for a constitutional amendment banning gay marriage, especially in the middle of a war. My guess, this amendment was purely politically motivated and an attempt to distract people away from the failed policies of this administration. Personally, I support gay marriage and I don't think it forces anything on anybody. Will some people find it offensive? Sure, but nobody has the right to never find anything offensive so I say tough shit if they don't like it.

Kevin | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 12:05 am | <#>

dudeman, if your party doesn't hate gays then how come they vigorously try to deny them basic rights granted to most other citizens. I'm not just talking about marriage, gays are not even allowed to serve in the military. Hell in some states it is illegal for gays to even have sex. It's funny how the republicans always preach about individual freedom and personal responsibility when it comes to their money but as far as what people do in their personal lives, republicans will always try to intervene. It's just as Rick Santorum said, Citizens should not have the right to privacy in their bedrooms.

Kevin | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 12:08 am | <#>

Kevin | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 12:10 am | <#>

I don't support the gay marriage amendment, and it was GOP renegades in Congress that crushed it. I don't believe every thing my party or my president does is right, that is why I am not a syncnophant.

But, at the State level, the "State" on the marriage certificate means the people of the state, all of them, and you could force people to be a party to something that is against there religion.

And do you think its right to have God on our money, where Hes been since the Civil War, or in the pledge?

What Kevin fails to grasp is that in America, as oppse to countries like England or Germany, the Party is not a centralized, disciplined organiztion, that makes policy and carries it out. There are many Dems who feel essentially the same way that I do on gay rights, and many Repubs who are gay, or secular.

This is why his vision of a Christian, Fasticst GOP, slowly taking power is unrealistic.

---

Dudeman, only 6 GOP senators, most of them BIG TIME Rinos voted against the federal marriage amendment. Both political parties want bigger government. The democratic party wants a government where government is used to help out the economically impoverished, promote peace, and fight discrimination, while the republican party wants a government that benefits the super rich and tells people how they should live their personal lives, and enforce it. You may disagree, but the GOP platform doesn't and by voting republican you support the religious right's theocratical agenda.

As for the Under God in the pledge and all that nonsense, no I don't support and if it said "one nation under Allah, Buddah, Thor whatever then your party wouldn't support it either. As I said previously I think government should remain NEUTRAL on religion. There should be no religious preference whatsoever and by having "one nation under God" in our pledge and "in God we trust" on our money shows a bias towards the christian religion. I see "in God we trust" as an infringement. So in answer to your question, no I don't support it.

From NRO Online:

Just heard from a source close to the campaign, tuned in to the conversations at the highest levels.

According to the Bushies, the last few days have seen a huge burst of momentum in their numbers.

They think Bush is ahead by a few points nationally. They expect the next round of tracking polls to show a bit of a bump.

The internal polls show a significant lead in Florida (outside margin of error) and Arkansas is out of play, with a Bill Clinton visit or without. As for most of the other big ones - Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Ohio, and Pennsylvania, internal polls show all too close to call.

Michigan is seriously looking like a pickup - Bush and Cheney could be there four times in the last four days.

An exit poll of those who have already voted show Bush ahead by 15 points! [UPDATE:

This is ahead 15 points overall, nationwide, not just in Michigan. Obviously, those who have already voted are only a small, small segment of the electorate at large, so one should not read too much into this number. But it is interesting.]

Undecided voters appear to be breaking Bush's way - some days he has a slight lead, other days it's right around 50-50. (Note this would be considerably better than the 1/3 calculated that Bush needs here.)

Finally, the ammo dump story appears to have left the Kerry campaign deep in al-Qaqa.

Tommy Franks is going to enter this story and rip Kerry and the New York Times a new one. The Kerry folks are acting like they realized they have botched this story, and want to shift back to domestic topics. Lockhart, Bill Richardson on Imus — when asked about al-QaQaa, they dodge the question and quickly try to bring up other issues.

The campaign is going to avoid the Russian angle and go with the straightforward, "As the facts mount in this story, American people have a choice between believing Kerry-NYTimes-CBS or believing Bush and the Troops."

This source close to the campaign didn't say it, but I wonder if the Bush administration wants to deal with Russia in its own manner, and not have whatever diplomatic confrontations are going on behind the scenes complicated by a furious American electorate blaming Russia for hiding Iraq's weapons and explosives.

Kevin,

The whole point and purpose of God is to enforce our moral beliefs on society like in the old days of our country before FDR took our country away from all of that. Remember all of your one room schoolhouses? Not a single one of them had violence or bullies because you had one teacher teaching 30 students, and the teacher maintained the students a hell of a lot better than in todays "government infrastructure" schooling. If we are going to be a more just and goodly nation, We have to become a Just and Godly Nation. Yes, I am a traditional conservative who believes in the establishment of federalism and i dont really wholeheartedly believe in putting God in Government, but God in the workplace, Schools, etc, should not be that bad. The reason why we cannot have God in our schools and work places today is because alot are controlled by panzy socialists. We have to get back to the traditional values this country should uphold in morality and values, and that is to get government the hell out of our lives.

As a great philosopher once said, the more government you have the more it floats toward oppression and tyranny. The less government you have , the more it floats to freedom and liberty. God in our schools and work place would never be tolerated in these times because liberals decided to put Government in charge of our schools. So when you have government there, You cannot absolutely not have God there because of the Us Constitution. And of course the separation of church and state. I wholeheartedly respect the separation of church and state, because as i said i am for federalism and am a strong traditional conservative. But the thing here is, Schools should not be under the control of government. We have to return the school infrastructure back to morality and values we once had before liberals put government in charge of them. we have to go back to the old days when teachers did not have a bureaucracy controlling them. That way we can put God back into our public schools and private schools both, not just the private schools, and we should offer it as an optional thing so that no every student is forced to believe in the same thing.

Lawerence G Henderson, if you like private schools then send your own dreadful little spawns there where they can be brainwashed. Everybody should have an equal opportunity to obtain a good education and if we left everything to the private sector, it would mean that those who were born to a family that struggles economically would not have much of a chance to obtain a good education. Sure you can talk about personal responsibility but when parents are punished, so are the children. We need an education system that works for everybody and if you don't like it, you don't have to send your kids to public schools.

Kevin | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 12:37 am | <#>

and if you don't like it, you don't have to send your kids to public schools.

Panz Socialists just means that you have a term of wanting socialistic programs that are paid out of our hard earned tax dollars to support a cause that should not be supported by government and our hard earned tax dollars. Havent any of you considered that maybe the problems facing todays public schools are the direct result of a government controlled bureaucracy controlling them and regulating every move every single child makes.

Lawerence, the problem with our schools is the exact opposite of what you are saying. Our schools need MORE federal funding. We have too many students per classroom, we need to extend afterschool programs which have been effective at reducing teen violence and teen pregnancy. We need to rebuild schools which are falling apart in minority communities and poor communities and we need to also fund special education programs for students who learn at different rates.

Lawerence, you said that NO taxdollars whatsoever should be used to fund public education yet you support President Bush who signed into law the no child left behind act which puts far more funding into public education than Clinton ever did.

dudeman, what the fuck are you talking about? I never complained that people couldn't send their kids to private schools. I'm against private schools and I think all children should be educated in public schools and be taught the same curriculums. The real choices in education should come with college.

Kevin | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 12:51 am | <#>

I just graduated High School in 2003, frankly I learn more by skipping class and going to the library to read about politics than I did in the class room.

THATS what we really need. Projects mean so much more to you when they are the product of INDIVIUAL INITIATIVE, than when you only do something because you have to.

dudeman5685 | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 12:51 am | <#>

More funding by government equals more bureaucracy. The school system is perfectly capable of handling everything for our children, if they didnt have whiny bureaucrats regulating their every moves.

Bush's education doesn't put federal funding into education. It puts state and local funding into education, so that our local school communities can get back to the business of handling our nation's children. Yes there is the thought of accountability and local control. Its right there in his plan written in full force.

Lawrence G Henderson | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 12:53 am | <#>

Lawerence, let me repeat myself BUSH's no child left behind act is the largest increase of federal funding towards education in HISTORY..(well it would be if it were fully funded), yet you say that there should be zero federal funding towards education, none. Yet you support president Bush. Is this not a contradiction on your beliefs?

Kevin | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 12:55 am | <#>

Lawerence, come again?
Local control with a federal standard to reach. if there was no federal funding at stake then why would schools be worried about implementing the federal standards. they'd have nothing to lose by ignoring them.

al-cali | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 12:56 am | <#>

How is it consistent? At one moment he laments a free market system of schooling because it would be hard on the poor. Try to equalize the poor within the free market frame work. AND ALLOWING THE CHOICE OF PUBLIC SCHOOLING and our friend still cant support it.

He won't be satyfied until we are all uniform. And I HATE uniformity.

dudeman5685 | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 12:56 am | <#>

Actually it is but to no extent and avail.

You see, your putting the terms of federal involvement in education and there is a big difference between federal involvement and federal funding. The federal government still is the backbone of our society and they trickle down to the state, local and school board level. But the point i am trying to make is that today in public schools, You have constant watch over a student by bureaucrats from the federal level, and that is totally uncalled for.

And that is also where i am getting at in the funding and the government process of stealing our childrens' futures. Government constantly wants to manipulate how each and every child learns, and if they arent learning enough, or postwise, are learning too much, The Government wants to step their butts in to keep on pressing those students to (well you get what goes here.)

Lawrence G Henderson | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 1:00 am | <#>

because the 'choice' projects offered are really laughable at what they would provide.

CA has choice, you can switch between schools in a district easily and can even go to other districts if you want. real choice, but it doesn't necessarily make the quality of education any better.

I have experience in a program that Lawrence is talking about. The SELF program must meet with me a certain amout of time each week, I have to have a paid and voluteer job, and then they get federal funds. well your claim that Bush's education policies haven't increased federal funding towards education are fallacious, but I'm not going to bother pointing out your hypocrisies. I think your approach towards education is to treat it like a business. I'm not against competition and setting standards but if we drain federal funding from public schools the people who get hurt are the students. Our public schools are in bad enough shape as it is. You seem to think the government is responsible for problems in education but look at other countries with public schools like Japan where students are learning algebra in the 6th grade. What we need to do is RAISE education standards and we need MORE government help. We need fewer students per classroom so students are given more individual attention, we need more afterschool programs and maybe we need to start having 6 day school schedules in order to remain competitive with the rest of the world. If we cannot keep up with the world in education, we will not keep up in ingenuity, we will not keep up in manufacturing we will be behind on everything and rely almost entirely on exporting since nobody here will be qualified.

Bush's education budget is the largest increase of federal funding of education, and that is why I support it. But that federal funding trickles down to the state and local level to make sure that state and local level authorities, and more importantly, our school boards, take into account what happens in our children's futures.

That is the difference between him and John Kerry.

John Kerry will keep us with the same thing. Big federal spending. But with big federal involvement too.

George W Bush is big federal spending, without the big federal involvement.

This is kinda why the founding fathers didn't want federal involvement in educations. The kids sit at their desk while the politicians argue on something very close to the voters heart. And the voter usually has no choice but to send his kid to the public school.

Education will always be there for the pols to harp on. But this is 2004, not 1776, and we have to have it.

dudeman5685 | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 1:15 am | <#>

that is exactly what is wrong with our schools. We dont need ANY bureaucrats running our schools and our childrens lives in school. Here's the thing. No matter what we do on many social issues it is going to reflect someone's beliefs. If we allow gay marriage, it reflects the beliefs of the people who believe we should have it. If we outlaw it, it reflects the opposite beliefs. Kevin, you are misidentifying the causal relationship here. There are plenty of non-Christians who are anti-gay marriage because that's what their beliefs are. By your logic, any policy that Christians support is Christianity forcing itself into government. Many Americans share Christian/Jewish/Islamic/Shinto/atheist/etc. beliefs without belonging to any one of these necessarily al-cali,

You're right, seeing where the graduates are would make more sense. I thought about it, but it'd take too long, and I don't really feel like it.

Still, it's a pretty strong correlation, and I doubt it's by chance alone.

What is also interesting is that numerous psychological studies have proven that deeply religious people have a lower IQ (on average). Where do these people live? You bet, the Red States, which also fits the pattern in the map for university locations.

To be fair, the same studies show that people who are deeply religious are also more self-confident. Of course, Kerry is right that you can be confident but wrong.

Hey Cath;

I don't know about the IQ thing, but I do believe there are people of faith in all ranges of IQ, background, dem, repub. Bush has been very successful in tapping into this. But i have issue when the separation of church and state gets so blurred as it has. When faith trumps science, we regress as society.

Independent Mark | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 8:39 am | <#>

I just did some calculating with the numbers that Zogby has out, giving Kerry CO, IA, WI, and OH and giving Bush FL, MI, NM, NV, and MN. Even if Kerry wins Pennsylvania under that scenario, Bush still wins 277-261. That being said, I don't really trust Zogby's polls that much this time around. I think he is wrong on Minnesota, Michigan, and Colorado.

Let's look at Colorado for a moment. The Zogby poll is the ONLY poll all year that Kerry has led on. In the last month alone the polls read like this: Bush by 9,8,5,6,6,5,6 and 7. Then there is the Zogby poll which has Kerry up 1. Interestingly enough, this is a three point gain for the President in one day. Perhaps his poll was off on a couple of days in there tracking and is correcting itself.

In Olympic sports that are judged, usually a competitor's highest and lowest scores are thrown out because humans are prone to error. The judge who scored him/her the highest may not have seen something that everyone else saw and the one who scored the lowest may have thought he/she saw something he really didn't. The same principle can be applied in polling. Throw out the highest and lowest and average the rest. Does anyone really think Bush is up by 8 in Florida like the L.A. Times said the other day?

Catholics against Kerry | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 8:40 am | <#>

Independent Mark, I am just presenting what seems to me at least to be a logical impossibility. Those who say there is no God must be able to prove that something came out of nothing, otherwise you would have an infinite regress.

Faith and science should go hand-in-hand with each other. Both seek to arrive at truth. Since truth cannot contradict itself, they are not mutually exclusive of each other as some want to say.

Catholics pro Kerry, even if those numbers are true, which I doubt they are, they pale in comparison to the people that Saddam Hussein murdered, raped, tortured, etc. We just found a fourth or fifth mass grave, I lost count, with over 300,000 people that Saddam Hussein murdered in it. If my math is right, that is at least 1.5 million people that he murdered that WE KNOW ABOUT. What about their families? Are American lives more valuable than Iraqi lives? I don't want any of our boys to die, none. However, I don't want murderous dictators going around killing whoever they damn well please while we just sit on our hands over here and say, "Out of sight, out of mind." Well, one of the reasons why I have had a sudden change in optimism about this election is because of the fact that pollsters do not include people who do use cell phones. These are millions of people, many of them young people who are not included in the polls, and according to a poll I saw on MSNBC, young voters vote democratic by a larger than 15 percent margin over republican. Plus these polls does not take into account the sudden surge in voter registration.

I believe that whether or not Kerry wins this election depends on how successful the republican party is at disfranchising as many voters who aren't likely to vote for them as possible.

(Storrs-AP, Oct. 29, 2004 9:20 AM) _ A University of Connecticut poll shows Fourth District Republican Congressman Chris Shays still leads his Democratic challenger.

The poll shows that among likely voters, Shays is ahead of Westport First Selectman Diane Farrell by five percentage points, 47 to 42.

A similar UConn poll two weeks ago showed Shays ahead 44 percent to 37 percent.

The poll director says Shays seems to be holding on to a marginal lead and time is running out. He says just how close the race ends up depends on turnout.

The phone poll of 500 registered voters was conducted from October 26th to October 28th and has a sampling margin of error of nearly five percentage points.

Schilling will NOT campaign for Bush in NH today it was just announced. Sorry guys....there goes your hope at NH.

Aussie Observer,

I saw someone taking a shot at you for daring to speak on American politics.

The sad fact is that many foreign nationals know more about American politics than about half of the American electorate.

And if Americans expect other countries - particularly democracies - to join us in sending their kids to die in Iraq, then Americans had better get used to the idea that foreign opinion really does matter.

The US represents about 6% of the world's population and controls about 70% of the world's wealth.

There are two ways to maintain this inequitable imbalance. The first is force - we can fight everyone who disagrees with us.

The second is moral persuasion. We can use our moral strength and leadership to help shape foreign opinion.

Frankly, option two makes much more sense but who are we to tell that to the right wing. They are ready to go it alone and send our kids to die in unnecessary foreign wars.

For all those Kerry supporters who are counting on a surge of new voters to rush to Kerry and put him over the top, there is bad news. In the latest poll taken for the MTV "Rock the Vote" campaign (conducted by Pace University) Bush has the lead with new voters, 48 to 44%.

"Among first-time voters, President George W. Bush seems to be gaining ground as the campaign proceeds. He has a statistically insignificant lead over Senator John Kerry (48% favor Bush in a head-to-head race, and 44% favor Kerry). Bush's support in this group has climbed 8 points since the previous Pace Poll/Rock the Vote survey in July (from 40% to 48% now). Meanwhile, Kerry's support has slipped 6 points (from 50% in July to 44% today). Seven percent remain undecided."

Other highlights of new voters:

- Kerry's unfavorable rating is 46%
- slightly more of NVs claim to be conservative than liberal
- 41% of NVs go to church at least once a week

-55% of NVs go to church at least once or twice a month
-38% of NVs claim to be Evangelical Christians or "born-again"

The poll report begins with a quote from James Carville: "You know what they call a candidate who's counting on a lot of new voters? A loser."

i'll take the Economist poll that has Kerry leading 60-33 in a head-to-head, or the Harvard Institute of Politics Poll that has college age students picking kerry over bush by 20%.

A little FYI: you're numbers lose all credibility when you claim that nearly 40% of Rock the Vote voters are born again christians.

Still, the fact that you have a poll that has such heavily religious leadings [above the national % of evangelicals and religious activity] and bush isn't blowing it away, is indeed, a very very good sign

To DOD and RC for Kerry:

The poll quoted (Pace U/MTV) was of ALL new voters, not just College Students

In their numbers, the NVs are 40% age 17-30, 35% age 30-54, and 25% age 55 and up. So the under 30s are just a portion of NVs. I don't doubt that Kerry has a lead among the under 30s, but they are NOT a majority of the new voters.

Remember, too, that college students are now a bit more conservative and religious than past generations.

The other thing to remember here is not just the individual poll, but what polls show from time to time. Comparing an earlier version of the same poll (in July) shows that Bush has gained 8 points on Kerry since July (from 40% to 48%), and that in the same time period Kerrys' unfavorable rating rose 10%, from 36 to 46%. As I've been saying for the last few weeks, the trend for Kerry is not good.

Catholics Against,

Glad you brought up OSB - and the issue of whether or not he is still alive.

I don't know if he is or he isn't, but I can tell you that the idea that he is somehow hiding in a cave is absolutely laughable. After all, the guy has kidney disease and requires dialysis.

If he is hiding in a cave, it must be the one with Gilligan and the Professor. The Professor has rigged up one of those bikes to power the dialysis machine made of coconuts, bamboo, and jungle vines.

Point being that if OSB is alive, he is being hidden and protected by powerful people with the means to get him the health care he requires.

I didn't approve of Dukakis as our nominee, although I turned 18 just after the election, so I couldn't vote.

I also think Torch is a criminal and I'm glad he's gone. His shenanigans soiled the office he held.

It's not that I (we) think we are better, it's just that many of your out west and down south puzzle us with your voting patterns. You'll support idiots like Tom Coburn when we all know he's a lunatic. You'll support Jim DeMint and his bizarre comments about how homosexuals or single moms shouldn't be teachers. You all make yourself look like a pack of fools. There is a bunch of hatred in many of you for those that are not like you and that is what bothers me. So, I don't think I'm better, I just feel sorry that you and others like you have these types of opinions. I believe in live and let live.

MN Voter-

I read thru some of this survey. The reason why Kerry doesn't do as well as the previous survey was the prev survey was conducting in July, b/4 the campaign really started..the sample has 600 voters that have registered after 2000. it does not include 7 states. basically, it is a weak sample. Once again, any sample where there is so much religious activity preference is skewed to the right..Im not sure if Rock the Vote has a history of doing national surveys that have a time series component, but if they do this one is def. not their best. Still, how do you explain a survey with so many evangelicals, yet barely a bush majority?

how's this, I disagree. Surely there is somebody who doesn't want to stop at red lights. I see people purposely run red lights all the time.

Furthermore, I'm opposed to slavery as well and I'm glad somebody imposed THAT value on society. Imagine a political candidate who took this stance, "I'm personally opposed to slavery. My religion tells me it's wrong. However, I can't impose my religious values on the rest of society, so I will only appoint judges to the Federal bench who will enforce the Dred Scott decision." Such a position would be absurd, surely you would agree?

As for women who get abortions? Assuming it were illegal, they should be prosecuted, but not as severly as the doctor performing the abortion. I think we should do all we possibly can to ensure that women are given proper pre-natal care and all the help they need to ensure that every child conceived in the U.S. is brought into this world and given a chance at life.

abortion is not a religious issue. By that logic, then we should make all murder legal since the Bible is quite clear that we shouldn't murder people. Abortion is a natural law issue. I could argue for the making of abortion illegal without ever mentioning God or Christianity once. My religion also teaches that slavery is wrong. Why is it not a religious issue then? Because it goes against the natural law. Nobody has the right to unjustly take anyone else's right. Abortion does just that. Therefore, no one has the right to an abortion.

we have no idea how many Iraqis died under Saddam, though i have NEVER heard of a number like 1.5mil.

that sounds like GOP propaganda trying to make 100,000 deaths WITHIN ONE YEAR seem like not alot. it is. Saddam was president for 30 years, if he'd had the rate of death that bush's war has, that would be 30mil deaths. think about that one.

As for real struggle, why did bush turn a blind on on the genocide in Sudan?

More abortions..more soldiers dying in iraq..more iraqi women and children dying..and turning a blind eye to brutal genocide in Sudan..

could you tell me why you're voting for this guy?

DoD, actually, it's why I voted for this guy. Here are my reasons:

1. He's more pro-life than Sen. Kerry. He will hopefully appoint judges to the Supreme Court who will overturn Roe v. Wade.
2. I am strongly in favor of the War based on the principle that we should help those less fortunate than ourselves. The Iraqi citizens were certainly in need of our help and we delivered.
3. Since 9-11 there has not been a single terrorist attack in the U.S. and many that were stopped. This shows me that the administration is doing their job.
4. Bush favors lower taxes for everyone. His tax cuts helped my mom start her own business and get out of dead-end job she hated. And no, my family is not rich.
5. I actually know where Bush stands on issues. Kerry has been all over the map on every issue under the sun except abortion which is always the trump issue for me.

I got the figure of 1.5 million from doing simple math in my head. We have found five mass graves (I think) with 300,000 bodies each in them.  $300,000 \times 5 = 1.5$  million.

As for the Sudan, I think we should have gone in there. I still think we should. However, Rome wasn't built in a day and you can't do everything at once. Whether Iraq should have been first, I don't know. However, that is not what is being debated.

The number of abortions increased under Bush.

Bush had the white house, the senate, and the congress, and Roe V Wade isn't even challenged.

Really, you must realize that the GOP has a real advantage by keeping Roe V Wade, b/c if it doesn't, it could lose voters like you.

Like the "war on terror" it hopes will never end, the GOP hopes its "war on abortion" doesn't end.

And you know as well as I that when 100,000 people die in one year in one country, it is not a good thing. Saddam was bad. But death is worse. 100,000 folks would be alive if it weren't for W...you are a true moral man, and I know in your heart you know that isn't good.

Dod, pleae, don't misunderstand, I'm not saying anyone dying is a good thing. I just think that many more people have died and would have died if we hadn't taken out Saddam and his sons.

You might have a valid point about not wanting the war on abortion to end. I don't know. As it stands though, I'll take my chances with a man who at least pays lip service to the pro-life movement as opposed to a man who fundraises for NARAL and Planned Parenthood.

If the number is as you say it is, 100,000, or even if it is 20,000, it is to many. I will be the first to say that. One dead is to many. However, what was the alternative? If we hadn't acted, Saddam would still be in power. It is a difficult moral question, without a doubt. What price are we willing to pay for the overthrow of a dictator? Perhaps I am wrong. I can admit that. However, when examining the alternative of having Saddam still be in power, I am left telling myself that we did the right thing.

Most of the 100,000 thousand were reported to have been killed in US bombing raids.

The administration has a policy of dropping a bomb in Sadr city of Faluja every time there is bad press. Between this and "shock and awe" we can start to see why so many Iraqis are dying.

The general who ran the air war in gulf war I for Bush's father supports Kerry. He can see that the present administration does not know how to use its military.

I think I will look more closely at the libertarian party next time,, its just this time, it is so much more important to get rid of Bush, that I have to vote for Kerry. There used to be a reasonable expectation that either side wouldn't be able to screw it up so bad, but Bush threw that out the window. Having a Radical Conservative with a republican Congress is a bad combination. It all worked well with Democratic President and republican Congress.

Independent Mark | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 12:34 pm | #

Max, to be consistent with my position, yes, we should use military action to overthrow every murderous, dictatorial regime there is. This should be done AFTER all other avenues have been exhausted. Remember, it was Saddam Hussein who stuck his middle finger at the U.N. 17 times. Had he simply complied with one U.N. resolution, this could have all been dealt with reasonably.

Catholics against Kerry | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 12:34 pm | #

"However, when examining the alternative of having Saddam still be in power, I am left telling myself that we did the right thing."

You are simply way off base, CAK. If the policy was to take out dictators, why does the US actively support the regimes of Pakistan, Saudi Arabia and Russia (to name a few).

George Bush never talked about stopping dictators before he launched the war. Even he is smart enough to know that he supports way too many dictators to do that. He wanted to get the WMDs and he alluded to connections between Iraq and 911.

There were no WMDs.

There was no 911 connection.

What are we left with? A 200 billion dollar bill, 1,000 dead Americans, 100 dead allies, 100,000 dead Iraqis and Osama Bin Laden free to plan terrorist attacks.

Max | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 12:36 pm | <#>

Can we start to be civil please? Let me pose a question to anyone willing to answer. If we had not gone to war in Iraq, then Saddam Hussein would still be in power. "This should be done AFTER all other avenues have been exhausted. Remember, it was Saddam Hussein who stuck his middle finger at the U.N. 17 times."

The resolutions had nothing to do with Saddam being a dictator. The UN passed 17 resolutions on WMDs. As it turns out, UN inspectors did get rid of all the Iraqi WMDs. Job Done. No need for war.

The UN has passed resolutions against dictatorship in Sudan. What is happening there? We are outsourcing the job to a small number of Nigerian troops.

NJ Dem,

Got to back you up on that. Being a life long resident of the NE I certainly don't think that I am better than anyone else.

But I think it is fair to say that many southerners (hopefully not most and certainly not all) have an unhealthy obsession (some might say it borders on hatred) for certain things "northern".

Particularly the state of Massachusetts and some of our elected representatives.

I have news for those of you have a burning hatred for our state: get over it - go see a therapist, or get a life.

In its' own way Massachusetts, like pretty much every other state - is a great state with great people.

We aren't better than others, but on the whole we are pretty well educated. Mass is home to some of the best universities, colleges and hospitals in the world. Even top Republican officials and families consistently send their children here to be educated at our institutions of learning.

Boston is a beautiful city, with a proud and serious tradition to political life and legacy. Our political back benchers could easily be Congressman and US Senators in other states - that is how much political talent we have here in Massachusetts (on both sides of the isle).

I understand where you're coming from. please also remember that the 100,000 dead, mainly women and children, are not my estimates..those are the estimates of the John Hopkins and Columbia university researchers.

we dont know how many folks died under saddam, and we dont know how many may have died down the line, but we DO know how many DID die right now. I worry greatly with the idea of the REAL deaths of hundreds of thousands of people is somehow made legitimate with the POSSIBLE/IMAGINED lives that may have been saved. You have to be very, very careful with that logic. There maybe reasons why it could be true, but you must admit this logic, particularly of this adminstration, is dangerous.

max, fair enough. I think you have valid points. Personally, I'm opposed to our alliances with any dictator. I don't care if it's Cuba, China, North Korea, Syria, Iran, Iraq, or anywhere else. I want them all out of power.

As for the no WMDs, I think the relevant question now is where are they because we knew he had them. He used them on his own people. We need to find documents that prove they were destroyed or at least tell us where they are. They have to be somewhere. I just hope they aren't in the hands of some terrorist because we waited so long.

I think Saddam should have been removed from power by working within international law. If that was done, the US would not be bearing 90% of the costs and 90% of the casualties. The Iraqi people would have also been much more receptive.

If the war was to be about dictatorships (which it never was) people in the UN would have been a lot more receptive. Instead, the US spouted conflicting remarks about 911 and WMDs, and then stormed out when the UN did not agree.

That is not right. Nor is putting Saddam at the top of the US list. Number one priority should have been Osama. Then North Korea. Then Saudi Arabia. Then Zimbabwe. Iraq should have been way down the list of nations with bad rulers.

Catholic Group Condemns Bush's 'Failure of Moral Leadership'

US Newswire: "Catholics for Political Responsibility has launched a stinging criticism of Bush's "failure of moral leadership," citing mounting casualties in Iraq, the torture and rendition of detainees, the growing number of families in poverty and rising abortion rates. The rise in poverty and abortion rates reverse significant progress made on these "life issues" during the 1990's. CPR is airing these critiques in two radio spots on 45 stations in OH, WI, CO, W. VA and NH. Professor of Roman Catholic Studies at College of the Holy Cross David O'Brien adds, "For all of Bush's talk about the Catholic vote, we find out from our Bishops this week that the President refused to complete the Catholic's Election Survey, the first major candidate to refuse their survey since it began in 1988. That is not surprising since Bush is on the wrong side of most Catholic teaching."

UNPRECEDENTED! New Yorker Magazine First Ever Endorsement for KERRY

The New Yorker: "[When Kerry's] foes sought to destroy him rather than to debate him they found no scandals and no evidence of bad faith in his past. In the face of infuriating [attacks], he kept the sort of cool that the thin-skinned and painfully insecure incumbent cannot even feign.... Kerry's mettle has been tested under fire ... of real bullets and the political fire ... and he has shown himself to be tough, resilient, and possessed of a properly Presidential dose of dignified authority. While Bush has pandered relentlessly to the narrowest urges of his base, Kerry has sought to appeal broadly to the American center [in] a time of primitive partisanship, he has exhibited a fundamentally undogmatic temperament. [He] has insisted that this election ought to be decided on the urgent issues of our moment, the issues that will define American life for the coming half century. That insistence is a measure of his character. He is plainly the better choice."

The fact is You cannot argue for the war on the grounds of "We got rid of Saddam"

Simply because you have to take into account that we had to invade a Middle Eastern County, practically Unilaterally. Then we have to occupy that country, while terroris movements are trying to paint the U.S as foreign invaders in order to boost their cause.

You see, this isn't some video game, you don't just blow a few things up and pluck the bad guy.

You also have to take into account the overall plan which is to provoke war with Syria and Iran. Democratization of the missle east by force, sounds like the Soviet Union in reverse.

People still persist that the war in Iraq has made us safer, when in fact the opposite is true. We have sown the seeds for future generations of terrorists, for a war that will have no end. Ask the Russians about how well they did in Afghanistan or Chechnya. Israeli's are arguably the most experienced and best at fighting terrorism. Have they "won" anything. "Heresy is the obstinate post-baptismal denial of some truth which must be believed with divine and catholic faith, or it is likewise an obstinate doubt concerning the same." Catechism of the Catholic Church paragraph 2089.

Since Bush is not obstinately denying anything the Church teaches, he cannot in the proper sense of the term be labeled a heretic. We also have to distinguish between formal heresy and material heresy. I don't know the exact definitions of the two off the top of my head, so I will withhold comment on that issue for now. "The victims are believed to be Kurds killed in 1987-88," this was the infamous kurd killing, which killed 5,000. The article says "its thought" that 300,000 died, but it doesnt give much more than that.

Still, you might ask: 300,000 dead, according to you, in 30 years...which is SH's reign.

what we have is 100,000 dead, in one year.

you do the math.

For your own information, there is no proof of the 300,000 dead. The mass killing that the article talks about was during the Iran/Iraqi War, and Ronald Reagan and the United States supported Saddam Hussein at that time

Or maybe he doesn't feel bound to stick with his party any longer and is willing to recognize the failure that Bush's presidency has been and can vote his conscience.

Here are Bob Smith's own words:

"As someone who worked with you daily for 12 years as a United States Senator, I am acutely conscious of the fact that we disagree on many important issues. Despite our differences, you have always been willing to engage in constructive debate in an effort to forge sound public policy.

I deeply respect your commitment to our nation and your patriotism which, I believe, was forged when you-like I-proudly wore the uniform of the United States Navy in Viet Nam...

Because of the courage and character you demonstrated in Vietnam, I believe you when you say that you'll do a better job than President Bush to win the peace in Iraq, as well as to win the war against terrorism.

President Bush has failed to restrain federal spending, sending our deficit spinning into the stratosphere. I well remember that you were one of a handful of Democrats who crossed the aisle to forge a bipartisan coalition in the Senate to balance the federal budget

As an environmentalist who served as Chairman of the US Senate Committee on Environment & Public Works, I know that this Administration has turned environmental policy over to lobbyists for the oil, gas and mining interests. On the other hand, I know first-hand of your commitment to a more balanced approach to environmental policy - one where we can have both jobs and profit for industry as well as clean air and water. There is no stronger evidence of this than your outstanding leadership and support in the restoration of the Florida Everglades.

John, for each of these reasons I believe President Bush has failed our country and my party. Accordingly, I want you to know that when I go into the booth next Tuesday I am going to cast my vote for you. So will my wife, Mary Jo, and all three of my children: Jason, Bobby and Jenny.

Moreover, I will do all that I can to encourage my friends in New Hampshire and Florida to join me in supporting you."

Just to chime in on the mass graves...

it has been my understanding that the mass graves are filled with #1 Kurds and #2 membebers of Al Satr's (sp?) group. The word was that after Gulf War 1, we left because the concensus was that Iraq would crumble on its on. Of course we wanted to expedite the process, so the CIA promised Al Satr's group logisitical support and arms. Well Satr marched and got slaughtered by the republican guard, and the US/CIA watched. This is why AL Satr's was the problem that he was. because although he disliked Saddam, he disliked the US even more. He feared that if he helped us and Saddam survived he'd get slaughtered again. He also just kinda had a bad taste in his mouth after we left him hangin (a la bay of pigs).

I could be wrong, but the mass graves to the north have Kurds in them, the mass graves in the south are the Satr' followers.

I am not a huge Kerry fan, but beating on Bush should be easy. All he needs to do is watch Jon Stewart's Daily Show. Last night he did about 15 seconds showing all the clips of Bush saying "Saddam had WMD's, Saddam was trying to get Uranium, Saddam is linked to Al Qaeda etc.." Now we have all heard Bush recently say he never said anything like this - why hasn't Kerry done a 30 second add of what Bush said Before, with what Bush is saying now? Need a follow-up do the same with Cheney and add in how he never met John Edwards.

It really should be that easy to illustrate the lies, without Kerry talking for 20 minutes about the finer points of his intellectual process (a la flip-flop).

I don't like Kerry, but I hate Bush. It shouldn't be that hard for Kerry to slam this guy. Why is he missing the obvious?

I'd suggest that some of you do the following: go to www.pollingreport2.com/wh2004a.htm#2way

There you will see the results of 65 polls taken among likely voters from 9/1/04 until today.

Of these 65 polls (by a dozen different organizations) 54 have a Bush lead (usually within the MOE) and 8 show the race tied. Only 3 polls list a Kerry lead, most recently a 2 point lead on 10/10. You can distrust individual polls in the particular, but in the aggregate, the polls show a steady, though slight, lead for Bush. I think there is a real stalemate here-- no momentum on either side.

Buster,

Occasionally challenging a few voters here and there is fine.

But that is not what the GOP in Ohio is doing. They conducted their own private mailing to democratic voters using certified mail. And anyone who refused to sign or respond to GOP certified mail in specific precincts had their right to vote challenged.

I am not going to beat around the fu$%^*& bush here. This is as Jim Crow as Jim Crow gets.

Tens of thousand of Democratic voters don't have to get permission from the GOP to be certified as legitimate voters. But that is in essence what the GOP is claiming by challenging their legitimacy.

If the Dems ever did anything like this to respond in kind it would throw the entire electoral process into complete chaos.

And as for voter fraud in general, any one on either side who is caught committing voter fraud should be charged, prosecuted and jailed.

NYC for Nader,

Einstein believed in God. Just thought I would mention that.

Also, I have voted for Nader in the past. Voted for him in 2000, and wrote him a few times in random local elections when I felt there were no other choices.

I even had the chance to meet Nader a couple of times when he came to speak at my college in Western Mass. I drove him home to his parents house in Conn.

As far as I am concerned, Ralph is a national hero. Just an amazing guy. But I am absolutely sickened at the way he has worked with the GOP in this election to try to get himself on the ballot in various states.

For instance, he had to know that the GOPers were out there gathering phony signatures for him. He is too smart to think otherwise.

He also had to know that they were contributing to his campaign as well.

The fact that he lets these scumbags blatantly use him makes me physically ill.

To GOP Cheats, I am voting for Nader because I'm truly sickened by Kerry and the Dems ( I doubt I need to mention how I feel about Bush, et all.) This country needs AT LEAST a viable 3rd party. As usual, the Dem canidate is trying to be all things to all people. And the way he trumped his military service was just vile, I guess all the millions of ex service men deserve the presidency. And by the way, what was an 18 year kid in 1968 doing with a video camera during a war? I guess he thought one day he might run for president? I'm tired of the American aristocracy. I know that Nader will not win, but the concept of Nader is what's important, we need more choice. If I lived in NJ, I would hold my nose and vote kerry, but NY is a Kerry lock and I can protest the two parties with my vote. And this way, I have the right to complain for the next 4 years, no matter who wins on Tues.

"I am now not medically cleared to do anything until I see Doc on Sunday, so I cannot travel with President Bush tomorrow (Friday).

Second, while I am a Bush supporter, and I did vote for him with an absentee ballot, speaking as I did the other day was wrong. While I hope to see him re-elected, it's not my place, nor the time for me to offer up my political opinions unsolicited. I am proud we have the right to vote, and the message I wanted to send but didn't, was that regardless of who you are voting for, the bottom line is that you MUST vote. You must vote because there are millions of Americans who have given their lives before us, and will continue to give their lives after us, so that >we can remain free to make the choices we need to make when it comes to electing our Nation's leaders."--

Of course, the story about the Clinton staffers damaging the whitehouse (taking the "W" keys off the computer keyboards, etc., etc.) ended up being a sham. The Bush media team let the rumors fester for three days and then admitted, under pressure from Tribune, that no such thing happened. The major newspapers running the story printed backpage retractions a week later, with the exception of one newspaper in TN that ran a story accounting for the history of the rumors, the reluctance of the Bush spokespeople to deny them, etc.

Things to consider:

First, every president who lost the popular vote has not been re-elected. John Quincy Adams was not re-elected in 1828, Rutherford B. Hayes did not run in 1880 and Benjamin Harrison was not re-elected in 1892.

Second, every president who initiated an undeclared war since World War II has not been re-elected. Truman did not seek reelection in 1952, LBJ dropped out in 1968 and Bush I lost in 1992.

Third, every president who has an approval rating less than 50% in June before the election has not been re-elected. Bush's approval rating in June 2004 was below 50%.

Fourth, consumer confidence is lower now than it was in 1980 and 1992, when both incumbents, Jimmy Carter and George H.W. Bush, lost their respective races.

And lastly, if the stock market declines between Labor Day and Election Day, the incumbent loses. The market would have to rally a couple of hundred points in the next few days just to get back to the nearly 10,400 level it stood around Labor Day.

If Green Bay wins Sunday, it's over.

NYC for Nader:

Kerry was at least 24 in 1968, an officer and a Yale graduate. Those who want to mock his service in Vietnam really have no sense of honor.

Good for Schilling (or his agent). That endorsement was a sour note in a state-wide feel-good moment.

I am feeling pretty confident about a Kerry win on Tuesday. I think he will win Michigan, PA and Ohio. He may even win Florida although if it's close I really believe the Repubs will steal it. I think the states most likely to flip from 2000 are NH and OH to Kerry (25 EV) and for Bush, Iowa and New Mexico (11 EV). I think turnout will win for Kerry in Wisconsin and Minnesota. The recent Badger poll of Bush +3 is actually encouraging to me because they always overestimate Repub prospects.

Kerry could win in Nevada and WV but doesn't need to. Virginia is not out of the question. Maybe Arkansas too. Maybe Colorado.

Bush could grab Oregon with low turnout and I'm a bit concerned about Hawaii although I think the center will hold.

Salazar is the favorite in Colorado. I think good turnout will help Castor win in Florida. I think turnout will help Murkowski win a slight upset in Alaska. Coburn should win in OK, Demint in SC.

SD: Daschle in the squeakiest.

North Carolina is a tough call. I think KY is also puzzling. Over the weekend Bunning may have more erosion. I think one more major blunder could cost him the election.

I think the Dems will gain 1-3 seats in the House. Down 3-4 in Texas, they need a net gain of 6-7 elsewhere. I think they'll get them this way:

Salazar in CO-3
Sullivan in CT-2
NY-27
Bean in IL-8
Barrow in GA-12
Keever over Taylor in NC.
Romereo in NM-1
Ross in WA-8

Bin Laden threatens new attacks

Bin Laden likened the US to 'corrupt' Arab governments
Arabic TV station al-Jazeera has broadcast a videotape featuring Osama Bin Laden, in which he threatens new attacks on the US.
The al-Qaeda leader accused President George W Bush of deceiving the American people in the years since the 11 September 2001 attacks.

He compared the Bush administration to what he termed corrupt Arab regimes.

The development comes as US voters prepare to go to the polls on Tuesday in the presidential election.

Ya, that's really funny JohnnyZ.

On that note I have a great idea for a GOP campaign add. The next minute they were jumping to their deaths. And it's all John Kerry's fault."

Knowing Carl Rove he probably already tested that one with a focus group.

I'd like to find a single person who will change their opinion because of this Bin Laden Video?

Republicans who somehow feel this video helps Bush, are not looking at the issues.

A vdeo from Osama doesn't change the threat we have already faced.

Plus the fact, Osama makes it quite clear it's not Kerry or Bush, it's policy. Although I understand the ignorant of the country will take this as a call to arms.

Anonymous | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 5:43 pm | <#>

well, I was wrong. I can admit when I was wrong. If you didn't read my post earlier, I said I thought OBL was dead because we hadn't heard from him in over two years. Well, like I said, I am enough of a man to admit when I was wrong. In any event, that dumb ass just assured the very thing he didn't want.

Bin Laden said that attack are possible. So anything is possible.

I say this video has re-elected President Bush b/c it will be the topic of discussion for the rest of the election and that helps Bush especially among women. There is a reason that he pops his ugly face up just days before an election and ITS not to Say Hello!

I just don't think Kerry has the stuff to fight this man.

Liz | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 5:47 pm | <#>

Now the question is, how do both campaigns approach this. They could both ignore it completely....or they both can use it to be terribly manipulative:

Bush can say it is a reminder of how dangerous a situation we are in, and only I can keep from Saddam acting out on his threats.

Kerry could use it as a reminder that Bush hasn't done shit in the war on terror, and that Osama is still running around loose threatening us.

I really think this is going to be a non issue. I hope the American people are smart enough not to let this guy effect the election in either direction.

Latest NC US Senate Poll:

MASON DIXON

BOWLES (D) 46.4%

BURR (R) 46.1%

MOE 3.27%

One thing to note on NC - most people including myself believe Bush will carry the state. However unlike most states, NC has straight ticket voting however the President has to be selected separately. With up to 25% of Bush voters voting Democratic for Governor there is always an overvote downballot in NC. Possibly due to Edwards as a candidate, in the primary, and in the general, there has been an unprecedented GOTV effort underway. On both sides but mainly Democratic. Over the last few months I myself have been asked to register no less than 11 times and I have been registered for over 40 years.

Well, Liz...couldn't you just as easily argue that Bush obviously doesn't have the stuff to fight this man, if he is making videos 3 years after 9/11 attacks.

Again, if you guys are going to manipulate this tape for political gain...the other side can too.

Anonymous | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 5:51 pm | #

This is not going to be a non-issues. Its all over the news right now and it will be all over the newspapers.

Im sure the terror alert will be raised just in case.

TO say this is a non-issue is down right crazy. 9-11 wasn't a non-issue and everythime Bin Laden pops his head up it helps President Bush b/c americans feel safer with Bush as President.

Liz | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 5:52 pm | <#>

I also agreed with you Catholic and I guess I was wrong too...maybe it was wishful thinking that Osama was dead.

I'm not so sure this video is going to change much, but it could give a slight, very slight edge to Bush. If Bin Laden had come out and said he doesn't support Bush or Kerry then that person would win, but he didn't say that from what I understand. It is too Bush's advantage that Osama took the time to criticize him though.

Evan, he certainly has. 3/4 of their top leadership is dead or captured. There has not been an attack on U.S. soil or on a U.S. interest or U.S. territory abroad since 9-11. OBL is beat and he knows it. We'll get him.

Cynical Cid | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 5:58 pm | <#>

It would be a politically risky move to raise the terror alert before the election because it looks political. I doubt that the US is going to be attacked by Bin Laden's cronies because they would do it instead of Bin Laden making tapes.

This is an opportunity for both campaigns to spin this in a positive way.

As Anon said, Bush can say Bin Laden is dangerous and out there. It heightens terrorism over the economy which is to Bush's benefit.

However, Kerry can point out Bin Laden is still on the loose and why is he free?

If this was a terrorist attack, it could benefit Bush, but its not.

I doubt if Bin Laden really cares who wins because his war is with America, its people and its system. Whoever is President is a symbol of that and thus, a target.

Glenn | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 5:58 pm | <#>

If Bush was serious to catch Bin Laden, we would have 135,000 troops in Afghanistan instead of Iran. Obviously, Bin Laden was secondary to Saddam for Bush.

And American interests are being attacked several dozen times a day in Iraq.

al-Qaeda has regularly had intervals of 2-3 years between terrorist attacks. This is no different now, except they can attack the middle east and other locations.

If we really had al-Qaeda under control they wouldn't attack nightclubs in Indonesia or train stations in Spain. All we've done is diffuse al-Qaeda's attacks around the world and this is suppose to be good for the U.S when Australians and Spaniards, our allies, are blown to pieces?

Smack down? what Smack down? The guy is alive and well and shooting videos. Obviously Bush hasn't done his job.

The fact that you guys see a threat as a good thing, shows a hell of a lot about your side.

Terrorist attacks are up in the years since 9/11.

How can anyone say we are winning the war on terror when the terrorists are attacking more often?

So we haven't been hit in the U.S. and that means we are winning the war?

What about the rest of the world?

Glenn | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 6:09 pm | <#>

You guys know im not a fan of Bush but I even think that this will get Bush re-elected.

Yes the terror alert will be raised. Out of all the times its been raised this would be a good time to raise it.

Glenn, a couple of things, then I'm off to bed.

First, I thought Al Qaeda wasn't in Iraq?

Second, is it our responsibility to protect everybody? The Spaniards and the Indonesians are perfectly capable of defending themselves. For whatever reason, rightly or wrongly is open to debate, the administration saw the two greatest threats to the U.S. to be the Taliban regime in Afghanistan and Saddam Hussein in Iraq. Both have been toppled.

As many have pointed out, we don't have the man power to take on al-Qaeda everywhere in the world at once.

I'm not going to pretend that I have all the answers, because I don't. I'm not privy to all the intelligence. I'm a college student who is conservative and I support the path the President has chosen to follow. That's the bottom line.

Like I said though, I'm going to bed. It's after midnight here.

Ciao!

Catholics against Kerry | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 6:12 pm | <#>

Why would the terrorist threat be raised? He made it clear he is calling for a policy change to avoid an attack, not an attack in general.

If we let Osama effect our election for Kerry or Bush, this country is more fucked up than I thought.

Do you feel any less safe than you did this morning. The threat has always been there. And people are voting because of it already...If Americans had brain cells, we'd understand how this doesn't change the playing field.

Anonymous | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 6:15 pm | <#>

Maybe if we spent a little more time and effort on OBL as oppose to Iraq we would have got this SOB by now.

---

Nowhere have I written that al-Qaeda was in Iraq when Saddam was in power. I'm not even sure they are there now, but it seems that every other Tom, Dick and Harry terrorist is.

And if we hadn't become bogged down in Iraq, we would have the manpower to take on al-Qaeda around the world.

Its unfortunate that we ask the Spaniards and others to assist us in a war, then some want to say its your responsibility to defend yourself when attacked. I think we need to be better allies than that.

If we are going to win the war on terror it has to be fought everywhere. That is the point. Terrorists shouldn't have a safe haven. That's where I differ with Bush administration on Iraq, it diverted us from getting the real SOB Bin Laden.

Glenn | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 6:27 pm | <#>

Kerry was gonna win this thing, too. He had Ohio in the bank; If Kerry won Ohio he had a minimum of 262 electoral votes.

Bush would have had to win Florida plus Wisconsin..... AND, at least four of the following five: Iowa, New Mexico, West Virginia, Nevada, and Arkansas. Unlikely.

Now..... I wouldn't be surprised if Kerry lost every state in the above paragraph.

I think most people would say they expected al Queda/bin Laden to do SOMETHING before the election and if they can't kill anyone in the process, then people are glad. Perhaps a videotape of bin Laden in the best they can come up with.

I think this does help Bush because people now realize that bin Laden wants Kerry to win and if they vote for Kerry, they're effectively giving into bin Laden. That's a powerful psychological force to deal with . . . even for a Kerry leaner . . .

One last thought before I sign off ... How can anyone see the confident image of Osama bin Forgotten and not remember that ...

On 9/12/01 the entire world was behind us in going after this butcherer. Had Dubya not insisted on fracturing the worldwide coalition to make a diversion into Iraq -- a country that had not attacked us and was no imminent threat -- and instead waited for the weapons inspectors to complete their work ... guess what? We would have no doubt gotten bin Laden and most, if not all, of his cronies with the help of the world community. Then ... IF there was still perceived to be a threat from Iraq after the report of the weapons inspectors ... a significant coalition to invade Iraq might have been possible. Though I suspect if we had known there were no WMDs ... even the U.S. people would have said no to Dubya and Rummy's Big Adventure.

Hello Cid,

I have to say I disagree with you on this being a good time for OSB to strike.

I think that he will wait until after the election. And if Bush gets elected I think he will try to strike us then in order to prove to Americans that Bush can not protect us.

I do agree with you though that this only helps Bush. He is beating Kerry on the issue of the war on terror (though I don't know the exact numbers right now).

So anything that gets people focused on terrorism is obviously good for Bush.

But I don't think OSB cares one way or the other how the election goes - unless of course he is being paid or protected by the Saudis. Then he might have released this video at their behest to help Bush.

Remember: in politics there are no coincidences.

JohnnyZ - you really are a fucking tool - running your mouth about how the threat from OSB is good for your side.

Fear, lies, and cheating. That's all you assholes have. Oh ya, that and 2 million people without jobs, and 5 million more without health care, and 4 million more living in poverty, and so on and so on and so on.

Make sure you let all of us know when your job gets outsourced so that we can all say "we told so."

A senior SwiftVet will claim soon that :

*Lt. John Kerry had a "less than a Honorable discharge in 1972".
It was upgraded in 1978 under Carter to " Honorable discharge"*

THAT IS THE REASON JOHN KERRY REFUSES TO SIGN FORM 180

UPDATE

It appears that the Swift Boat Vets may finally have broken through on this issue:

Okay, folks.

We got it finally. We have the Former Secretary of the Navy who stated, "Yes, Kerry did receive an Other Than Honorable Discharge".

Stay tuned for more...

UPDATE: As you probably know by now, the Vets' post has been pulled. No idea what this means, or whether the whole thing has any significance. I will say this, though: this item and the "Osama" video are reminders that a lot could still happen between now and Tuesday.

Americans are looking to elect the most LIBERAL government ever! Only a strong GOP vote in 2006 could stymie this vast left wing takeover.

Michael Moore in Salem Oregon said that Kerry was the most liberal senator in the US!! Too bad the GOP didn't tape his remarks and play them in ads. Maybe they have, I don't live in a battleground state.

We also need to look at John Kerry's record. Challengers need to be examined as carefully as incumbents. It could be worse.

Kerry's voting record needs to come under a fine tooth comb. His extremist left wing agenda is comparable to George McGovern, Mondale and Dukakis. Some of you young people can't remember back that far of course.

Kerry could have no influence in a GOP Congress. Don't expect him to follow through on his promises.

Kerry has a liberal voting record.

"Limit our involvement overseas"
Funny, that was what Bush was preaching in 2000

"and focus on domestic spending and social programs"

Funny, considering Bush grew the size of government more than any president in history...and that is not including defense and homeland security personal.

Badnarik on ObL latest tape:

"Osama bin Laden's tape gives us the clear-cut evidence that we need to identify the perpetrator of the 9/11 tragedy. Our highest military priority should be to capture bin Laden and bring him to justice – as opposed to continuing the war in Iraq and stationing troops in 135 countries around the world. I believe that a libertarian non-interventionist policy might have averted the 9/11 tragedy and reduces the likelihood of similar tragedies in the future."

This just shows Bin Ladin wants Bush to be prez. This is how he influences the election. He's evil not stupid. He knows this war has been a recruiting poster for terrorists. He knows Kerry isn't married to the Saudis and would be more likely to be forceful about their strong involvement in the terror movement. He also knows that by appearing on tape and saying that, people will do the opposite. He wants Bush to win.

Evan Moshing W/ Marshall | Email | Homepage | 10.29.04 - 10:44 pm | #

Sure, it's our "interventionist policy" that Osama and his posse of mass-murders wants to kill all "westerners". Why stop there? We can say it was the Jews' fault that Hitler wanted to kill all Jews. Or it's the Kurds' fault that Sadaam wanted to gas and kill and rape 100's of thousands of people.

This latest tape was for the Arab world, it's not truly for the US. When/if Bush gets defeated OBL will look like he affected the election.

Did you guys hear Kerry call the Islamists "barbarians"? As much as I agree with him it was so phony. That is not the way John Kerry talks... only did it to try to get some points and "show how tough on terrorists he will be"

I know I may not represent the majority and there is no doubt NY will be a blue state. Until today, I was undecided but leaning Bush. After today's events, I'm now less likely to vote for Bush. Not more, less. It upsets me to see Bin Laden looking alive, clean and well. The situation reminds me of a sheriff who promises to protect the community against outlaws, yet three years later thos outlaws are still on the lamb and taunt people, not to mention look very well feed and healthy. Maybe they are less scared of Kerry than Bush but its a change I'm willing to make. Just my two cents.

So far I notice something very interesting. Generally, if you were with Bush this morning, your with him tonight. If you were with Kerry this morning, your with him tonight. Some in the news media are contradicting themselves. Saying on the one hand, this Bin Laden thing may help Bush, but on the other hand, saying how the Bush camp preparing for the possibility of a loss in OH and PA. One analyst I heard tonight may have put it best, the Bin Laden issue may enhance Bush's numbers in states he's already winning anyway. Well, how the heck does an extra few points in an already red state help the guy? That's like saying Kerry will benefit from high voter turn out in IL. IL is already a blue state. What difference does it make if he wins it by 60 or 62%? What difference does it make if Bush wins a state like Utah by 65% or 68%? Some of these so called pundits make no sense.

Despite everything, they think heavy turn-out of organized labor, young voters and early voting will ultimately keep Wisconsin and Minnesota in Kerry's column -- but with a stern warning -- no Democrat better ever again take these states for granted.

Iowa and New Mexico some say Bush will win. I agree. New Hampshire, Kerry. The biggest non-story was that NJ and MI were competitive. Despite a few close polling along the way, neither never really were.

Ironically, this Bin Laden thing may well up Bush's numbers -- but in all the wrong places. States were he doesn't need it.

Fanatical anti-UN Bush voters should switch to Badnarik... apparently he promised to blow up the UN building on the eighth day of his presidency. But being a Libertarian and all he did say he'd give the occupants a chance to evacuate first:

"The day I enter the Oval Office, I will give notice to the United Nations. Member nations would have one week to evacuate their offices in the UN building in New York... At noon on the eighth day, after ensuring that the building was empty, I would personally detonate the explosive charges that would reduce the building to rubble. The same type of rubble we had to clean up after September 11th. I want to send a message around the world that United States foreign policy had changed dramatically, and unmistakably."

If Osama can cut tapes taunting me..that does not make me feel any safer..in fact..it means he has been running around for the last two years or so. Seems to me he looks better now than ever. I feel LESS safe today under Bush than ever before. Iraq is now destabilized and a perfect place for terrorist. Bush has created a whole new generation of American haters that will be recruited. People are now being beheaded and taken hostage weekly it seems. U.S. soldiers and trained Iraqi soldiers are being killed everyday. It seems that relationships between Russia have weakened. Bush is crap on issues like education, social security, health care, economy, environment, and it appears to me he is a rather ineffective commander and chief. What about the Shock and Awe? It only shocks and awes me that he might win this election..for religious reasons. What I do not understand is that the things he is against morally are already taking place in the U.S., like homosexual marriages and partial birth abortions. No president can change the winds of societal change, they can only change with them. In my opinion, fifty years to one hundred years from now homosexual marriages will be about like interracial marriages..not that big of a deal. In my opinion this country will be judged by God based on its people, not its president. May John Kerry win this election, forcing out a 1970's mentality on how to interact with the global world today!
